Out of the Difficult and Unexpected? Success and Opportunity

The end of the 2019-2020 school year was unexpected. On Friday, March 13, Assumption Catholic School closed for the remainder of the school year, and by Monday, March 16, the teachers and students were making distance learning work. For teachers who had never experienced a Zoom call or worked with Microsoft Teams, a new kind of learning emerged. Even now, school parents tell us that they couldn't have been more impressed with the way the teachers and staff immediately shifted to an online environment. Although they missed their friends and the social interaction, students were still engaged in the learning and made significant progress in the months leading into summer.

At the beginning of the COVID-19 pandemic, we didn't know what to expect. We wondered how many families we would lose and how the novel coronavirus would affect tuition. We appealed to parishioners and school families for immediate help with tuition assistance in case families requested additional financial support. We braced ourselves for worst-case scenarios with enrollment, but by God's grace, the opposite happened. The teachers and staff began planning for a return to in-person learning in September, and many new families began enrolling in late July. By the first day of school, we had 46 new students and an increase in K-8 enrollment from 165 students in May to 192 in September.

It shouldn't be a surprise that in the face of adversity and hardship, Assumption teachers and staff rose to the challenge. Loyal families who love our school did all they could to support our efforts. The school is positioned well to provide quality instruction in the 2020-2021 school year, whether it remains in-person or has to shift to distance learning. I feel blessed to be a part of this wonderful community and to see more than 200 smiling faces (behind their masks) in the hallways each day. Thank you for celebrating with us the successes and opportunities that have come from a difficult and unexpected situation.

Dan Anderson, Principal

FROM OUR PASTOR

Mission-Oriented: Fueled by Our Love for and by Jesus Christ

When we had to close the school in March 2020 due to the rapidly spreading COVID-19 pandemic, none of us knew what the future was going to hold, but each knew that it was going to be hard. Hard on our students, who thrive with structure and routine, now with all that structure and routine being upended. Hard on our parents, who suddenly had to balance work, childcare, and homework in circumstances very much outside of their own routines and plans. But maybe hardest on our teachers, who had to learn in a couple of weeks online teaching procedures that took a decade or more to implement at the collegiate level. Our teachers connect so well with their students, but those students were now separated from them, and from each other, on the other sides of screens. Nevertheless, our entire community rose to the challenge. Assumption Catholic School ensured that our students had a continuity in their education that very few other schools were able to provide.

Over the summer, the entire country was focused on whether our schools would open again. Parents were on the edge of their seats waiting to hear about Assumption, which did eventually open in person on the first day of school. We were extremely lucky in that Whatcom was one of the only moderate-risk counties in western Washington, so Assumption was able to open for in-person instruction when almost no other Archdiocese of Seattle school could. And we were only able to take advantage of that luck because, once again, Principal Dan Anderson and our faculty and staff went over and above the call of duty. They prepared detailed plans, procedures, and training to ensure that our students remained safe as we welcomed them back in the midst of a pandemic.

At every turn, Assumption has succeeded, even in these "unprecedented times," because the entire community has been dedicated, mission-oriented, and focused on the emotional and physical well-being of our students. It is a focus that is always fueled by our love for and by Jesus Christ. Our mission-oriented families, mission-oriented faculty and staff, and mission-oriented alumni and donors have all shown their true colors during this crisis, and those colors have shone brightly for all to see.

Thank you to everyone who makes this school a success—in the past, today, and for generations to come.

Rev. Jeffrey Moore

WILL YOU BE A SERVANT, TOO?

‘Supporting the School’s Mission’

BY PRINCIPAL DAN ANDERSON

In these uncertain times for schools, the mission of our Catholic school remains the same: we prepare students to go forth and make a lasting difference in the world. This is perfectly modeled by our faculty, who you can read about in this annual report. I am grateful for their visible work, the hours of preparation that go into lesson plans and their implementation. Yet I am most inspired by their unseen work, the unglamorous call of Christ: the office manager who risks her health to care for sick children, the librarian who oversees recess, and the teachers who do custodial jobs over the summer to clean and organize our school. As you know, Catholic educators go beyond job descriptions to embrace the grit of missionary callings. At Assumption, their loyalty and dedication are beyond measure.

To fulfill our mission and provide for the students and families, we need your help. As a previous Parent Teacher Club president reminds us, there is a need, indeed a list of needs, for our 108-year-old school. This is my ask for this year’s annual fund: repairing our school building. A third-floor classroom (retired Betsy Gottschalk’s) has a leak, the boys’ bathroom requires renovation, and the exterior brick work needs to be sealed and patched. Attending to these needs—along with furnishing books, laptops, and professional training—allows our school to be a place of transformation. Families of the 46 students new to our school this year tell me the classrooms, hallways, and the new playground are filled with joy. We hope you will partner with us in maintaining the space that fosters this love of learning.

“We continue to choose Assumption because every year, we are reminded of new ways the teachers, staff, and community are nurturing the students in body, mind, and spirit. The small class sizes allow the teachers to know and genuinely care about their students.” — Devin and Stephanie Wolf

I begin each school year by telling students of my own calling: “As your principal, my most important job is to prepare you for Heaven.” A Catholic education demands exceptional academic studies as well as holiness, charity, and kindness, too. This is what our teachers practice and preach. I hope you hear this calling, not only for our students but for yourself, in the pages here. I pray this annual report may move you to be a part of our mission of providing Catholic education for all of Whatcom County. In the words of Richard Gillard’s “The Servant Song,” I “pray that I might have the grace to let you be my servant, too.” Will you join me in this missionary calling and give? Will you be a servant, too?

A New School Foyer Where First Impressions Matter

Wisdom. Faith. The Light of Christ. These are the impressions our school's renovated foyer gives to prospective families, cherished students, and committed faculty.

Through weeks of hard work, volunteers and staff created a new entryway for Assumption Catholic School. Old carpet was torn out in favor of a modern, wooden floor. The entry is now painted deep navy, and the school logo emblazons a stunning accent wall. A more comfortable waiting area for families faces a wall-mounted monitor showing school parent and professional photographer Lee Eberhardt's photos of students.

Even with these modern updates, faith still lights the way in the new entry. A statue of Our Blessed Mother Mary, for whom the church and school are named (as in the Assumption of Mary into heaven), remains to welcome all who enter the school. And the educational mission of the Archdiocese of Seattle, written large next to the logo, inspires: "CHRIST is the reason for this SCHOOL, the unseen but ever-present TEACHER in its classes, the model of its FACULTY, and the inspiration for its STUDENTS."

We are so grateful for the commitment to our school from the all-volunteer force that gave this renovation a professional look. A special thank-you goes to Matthew Bui and his sons Andrew and Martin (both alumni) from M&M Hardwood Floors for donating numerous hours to laying the new floor.

We chose Assumption Catholic School because a personal relationship with Jesus is the most important thing we can encourage in our children and ACS encourages and feeds their personal faith. — Patricia Prenosil

Just in Time! Students Are Ready to Climb

Campaigning for a new playground started with highly regarded experts in January 2020. Students spent hours analyzing which candidate would deliver the best promise for years to come. On March 7, families, faculty, and friends gathered together at Assumption's largest annual fundraiser, the Growing Great Kids Auction and Gala, to raise $207,000 for the school. Of that total, $42,000 went to the Fund-the-Need for a new playground and its gated perimeter.

The kids had picked a winner! The school used the auction money to purchase a new playground featuring four areas, all connected by paths, to motivate different types of playing like running, jumping, climbing, and hiding. With masks on, volunteers helped assemble and install the bright red, white, and blue equipment; lay new drainage; and move a mountain of fresh mulch from the playing field to the playground—just in time for the start of the 2020-2021 school year.

We are grateful for the support and continued generosity of this community!

Foundation Focus: Long-Term Viability of School

JULY 1, 2019 TO JUNE 30, 2020

FOUNDATION INCOME, ALLOCATIONS, AND BALANCE

- Foundation Expenses
- Endowment Investment
- Tuition Assistance & School Operations
- 4% Interest Distribution
- Educational Enrichment Transfer of Assets

* This reflects only the 2020 Endowment Fund balance, not all the funds that have been in the Foundation to date.

In the 2019-2020 school year, the Assumption Catholic School Foundation positioned itself for greater success in the future. The Board of Directors is now focused on building the endowment fund exclusively, and they spent the year completing an extensive rewrite of the by-laws to meet this objective. The Board removed giving categories like Adopt-A-Student and Educational Enrichment that led to confusion. The Foundation is focused strictly on the long-term viability of the school through the endowment while still providing for tuition assistance and school operations through its allocations to the school.

As the Foundation now has a specific objective, the upcoming year will be focused on attracting contributions for long-term growth. These initiatives will encourage donors to include the Foundation in estate planning; to contribute their tax-free Required Minimum Distribution (RMD) from 401K plans; and to consider donations of stocks, bonds, and other investments.

The school utilizes the Fulcrum Foundation, which retains Mercer Investments to manage and hold assets, ensuring highly qualified and well-recognized fund managers for security and growth. The balance in the Foundation's Endowment Fund has weathered the COVID-19 storm quite well with a June 30, 2020, balance of $588,255. Although this looks like a decline in assets from the previous fiscal year, this number reflects only the current Endowment Fund balance, which no longer includes all restricted and unrestricted funds of the Foundation. Those additional assets have now been allocated to the school, as shown in Educational Enrichment Transfer of Assets.

Assumption Catholic School has not only provided a strong start to our girls' education, but has assisted us, as parents, in creating well rounded children.”

60 Years of Loving Service

If you browse through photos of Assumption Catholic School classes from the past 30 years, you may recognize familiar faces in the sea of plaid uniforms and sometimes funny fashion trends. And every few pages, you'll see among the students—many of whom are now parents of their own Assumption students—either Betsy Gottschalk or Regina Campbell.

Ms. Gottschalk began teaching at Assumption in the fall of 1989. Drawn to the Assumption community because of the possibility within the parish and school to “talk about and listen to our spiritual core,” she has taught middle school language arts, social studies, and literature, as well as art to all grades. Over the years, Ms. Gottschalk has been an innovator, developing language arts and art curricula for the Archdiocese of Seattle Catholic Schools. She has been an award winner, recognized as the Washington State History Teacher of the Year in 2008. She has been a mentor, guiding students on learning trips to San Francisco; Washington, DC; and Phnom Dek, Cambodia. She has also been a servant leader as the assistant principal for 15 years. Betsy’s influence at Assumption can even be seen in our logo, which she designed. Its central flame reflects the connection of body, mind, and spirit, but she emphasizes that “attention to the spirit is the foundation of a child’s formation.” All told, Ms. Gottschalk has shaped more than 600 students at Assumption—a lot of servant leaders now shaping our community!

The emphasis at Assumption on work ethic and traditional curriculum continues to benefit our students. Many high school level educators have told us that they notice Assumption graduates. Assumption students have a skill set that exceeds that of their peers and leads to success in and out of the classroom.” — Lynette Machinski

Just a few years after Ms. Gottschalk arrived at Assumption, Mrs. Campbell joined the faculty when her own children were in their early years as students at Assumption. Inspired by the teachers and coaches who were her role models, Mrs. Campbell says she knew “God gifted me with good physical health and desire to move.” Mrs. Campbell expanded the lineup of traditional sports at Assumption by inspiring students to move through a physical education curriculum that included tumbling, dancing, bowling, rollerblading, and skiing. She shared her love of sport through coaching teams at the high school level, and she brought volleyball and archery programs to Assumption while collaborating with parents to create learning experiences around scuba, kayaking, skating, and fishing. Mrs. Campbell’s creativity, energy, and dedication did not go unnoticed. In 2006, she was the National Catholic Education Association Distinguished Teacher, and she received the National Association for Sport and Physical Education Star Award for three years in a row! Mrs. Campbell has been a dynamic force in the gym, on the playground, and in the classroom. Her energy has touched the life of every Assumption graduate for the past 28 years.

This past June, in the midst of the pandemic and without much fanfare, Ms. Gottschalk and Mrs. Campbell retired. Their dedication to the Assumption community over nearly 60 combined years is truly remarkable. We are so very grateful for their contributions to the Assumption community!

2019-2020 Graduation

Things looked a bit different for our graduates but we are so grateful for the opportunity to celebrate our class of 2020 in July.

HEALTH PROTOCOLS

Cohorts, Masks, and Six Feet Apart Help Keep School Open

In order to safely open in person, Assumption Catholic School staff prepared health protocols this past summer. In a letter addressed to all school families on August 18, Principal Dan Anderson laid out procedures which included new health-screening stations at drop-off, requirements for face coverings, and one-direction hallways. Additionally, the school purchased and installed new touchless water fountains in two locations and set up more hand-washing stations. Limited access is given to parents, who are now also required to be screened when entering the school. These new guidelines have resulted in fewer opportunities for chaperones and volunteers. In addition, no field trips are scheduled for the current school year.

To ensure that Assumption students stay six feet apart while in school, they are separated into “cohorts” with no more than 16 students in a class. They also play in their cohorts at recess to limit the contact tracing. Thankfully, even with the masks, students are happy to be together and on campus. Every day that the school remains open is a blessing and a gift. The major unfortunate outcome of the new protocols is the very limited calendar of events this year. Many events, like the Blessing of the Animals, can be done with social distancing, but a majority of events like Holy Hoops and the Ellen Anderson Fun Run may need to be canceled.

Zoom calls and Microsoft Teams meetings have replaced the majority of School Commission, Finance Committee, and Parent Teacher Club gatherings, but the work is still getting done. Fundraising has taken on a new design. The Parent Teacher Club is raising funds through take-out meals each month and finding other creative ways.

A YEAR NO ONE COULD IMAGINE

From School to Distance Learning and Back Again

On Friday, March 13, 2020, Assumption Catholic School closed: faculty and students left classrooms under the coronavirus threat. On Monday, March 16, distance learning commenced, with faculty teaching students online. The creation of distance learning happened in three days.

Then, within less than three summer months, Assumption teachers, led by Principal Dan Anderson, planned and executed their route back to in-school learning. In order to welcome students back to school on September 2, while following state and local guidelines for schooling in a pandemic, faculty wrote new health protocols, created new classrooms, deep-cleaned the school, and even sewed regulation masks (with images from Dr. Seuss).

Third-grade teacher Mrs. Paula Martin-Zender summed it up: “We’ve done something really big. We converted learning at school to learning at a distance and then back again—with all of us still together.” Deeper conversion amid a big challenge is what Catholic education is all about.

FALLING IN LOVE WITH ACADEMICS

On the first day of school this year, Noah Wolf was not happy about having to leave his fourth-grade class an hour earlier than dismissal, even though he understood the departure was for his annual physical. Noah had already shared his favorite summer memory with classmates, completed a math inventory, and invented a game for six-feet-apart play at recess.

“This is why I love this Catholic school,” exclaimed his mother.

“My child didn’t like his former school. At Assumption, he falls in love with fourth grade on the first day!” Falling in love with academics—feeling competent, making meaning, and applying knowledge—has a long history at Assumption.

ALL LEARNING PREDICATED ON READING

Kerry Thomas, teacher for 29 years, explains how all learning is predicated on reading: “From kindergarten through third grade, students learn to read. From fourth grade on, students read to learn.” Daily reading and writing are emphasized, not only in English and language arts but in math and science, too.

SCIENTISTS DISCOVER AND BUILD

It was Catholic priest and scientist Georges Lemaître who proposed the Big Bang theory of how the universe began. Inspired by those who live scientifically and religiously, Assumption students explore the wonders of their natural world.

They plunge hands into dirt to grow tomatoes and pumpkins in the school garden. They build miniature roller coasters to rediscover the foundational laws of gravity and motion. They unpack big ideas from natural systems—starry skies to deep blue oceans—at signature class events: the sixth-grade overnight at Camp Hamilton and the seventh-grade trip to the Oregon Museum of Science and Industry in Portland.

MATHEMATICIANS SEE PATTERNS IN THEIR WORLD

Twenty-year teaching veteran Mrs. Martin-Zender (Mrs. M-Z) tells her third-grade students, “Mathematicians see patterns.”

Seeing those patterns begins in Anna Whelan’s kindergarten, where budding mathematicians learn to count 100 of their favorite things, like fish crackers, Cheerios, or balloons. In first grade, Paige McClurg’s scholars complete problems with pencil and paper and also use manipulatives—tactile game pieces on boards—to see their sums. Armed with protractors and rulers, intermediate geometry students see themselves as rising architects, astronomers, and artists.

The reward at the entrance to middle school? Trained engineers Jill VonFeldt and Karen Evans engage all learners, gifted or challenged, in advanced math and algebra.

108 YEARS OF EXCELLENCE IN ACADEMIC AND SPIRITUAL FORMATION

Back to the first day of school: in the middle of a six-feet-apart, rollicking lunch recess, Mr. Anderson signaled for students to stop playing. Out of the church, at the conclusion of a funeral Mass, a coffin emerged and was wheeled to its hearse. As one life was prayerfully ushered out of the earthly world, 26 fourth graders, fairly new to this world, silently paid their respects, making the Sign of the Cross or bowing in prayer.

The purpose of our school has been constant for 108 years. It is felt in each year’s invigorating academic pursuits and reflected in this pause made by nine- and ten-year-olds who are growing not only as scholars but as reverent souls, too.

Where Are They Now? Assumption Alumni Bonds Hold Strong

We have recently heard from these Assumption alumni:

TIM HEALY (1947) attended Assumption starting in first grade in 1939 until 1944, when he moved with his family to Seattle and finished grammar school at St. Joseph's on Capitol Hill. He graduated from Seattle Prep in 1951 and entered the navy during the Korean War. After later attending Seattle University and the University of Colorado at Boulder, he graduated with a Ph.D. in electrical engineering in 1966 and has been teaching at Santa Clara University ever since. Now in his 59th year of teaching, he'll retire next year with a total of 60 years! Tim says, "Two of the things I most appreciated from my studies were a strong sense of arithmetic and of grammatical structure. The nuns (yes, they were nuns) taught me how to parse sentences, and I have used that knowledge all of my life, correcting student essays and reports."

RICHARD MUSCUTT (1950) recently sent us his original diploma from Assumption Catholic School dated June 2, 1950, when the school went through ninth grade, and a copy of his seventh-grade report card signed by Rev. J.G. Stafford, Pastor, and Sister M. Seraphina, O.P., Principal. At that time, the school was still run by the Dominican Sisters. He now lives in Lebanon, Oregon.

SUZANNE RIVORD (1969) attended Sehome High School after Assumption and went on to get a B.A. in education from Western Washington University. She now lives in Everett.

DORIA NELSON (2011) attended The Center School in Seattle for high school and then attended the University of Washington, where she earned a B.A. in international studies. She now lives in Seattle.

We are also blessed to have 13 alumni who are now sending their own children to Assumption. This is truly the highest honor for our school.

A CATHOLIC EDUCATION 'INTEGRATES TRADITIONAL FAITH INTO MODERN LIFE'

Rev. Bryan Ochs Is 2020 DISTINGUISHED GRADUATE

So many wise people, from the great writers of history to the spiritual leaders of today, encourage us to live in the moment. Accepting the challenge of being fully present can bring great rewards, but sometimes it takes a little distance to fully appreciate a moment. When Rev. Bryan Ochs visited Assumption to celebrate the school Mass on February 7, he shared a little of both perspectives with the Assumption student body.

Father Bryan attended Assumption Catholic School from preschool through eighth grade, graduating in 1996. During his homily, he recalled for the students his dislike (at the time) of uniforms and homework, drawing smiles from some like-minded students. He went on to share that as he continued his education at Sehome High School, Western Washington University, and St. John Seminary in Camarillo, California, he came to value his Catholic education, because it promotes "high standards of conduct and academics and helps students integrate traditional faith into modern life." He also mentioned the influences of his Assumption teachers, a few of whom are still teaching current Assumption students.

Now serving as pastor at St. Rose Catholic Church in Longview, Father Bryan was invited to the Mass to be honored with the 2020 Distinguished Graduate Award. Presented every year as part of the Catholic Schools Week celebration, this award is just one small way that the community can celebrate the great things alumni are doing. We would like to extend our gratitude for the roles alumni play in promoting the school, providing a network of education and employment resources for students and other alums, and helping to sustain the future of the school.
