NDRCHS selects its first Board of Directors

The Northern Deanery Regional Catholic High School (NDRCHS) is pleased to announce its first Board of Directors. The NDRCHS board reports directly to Archbishop Paul Etienne and works in collaboration with the Office of Catholic Schools to advise school leadership.

Board of Directors members are as follows in alphabetical order: Craig Cammock (Skagit County); Nicholas Ford (OCS superintendent); Adam Janicki (Skagit County, Immaculate Heart of Mary parishioner); Mollie Janicki (Whatcom, Sacred Heart parishioner); the Very Rev. Jeffrey H. Moore (Dean of Northern Deanery, Pastor for Whatcom Catholic); Bridget Rauvola (Whatcom, Sacred Heart parishioner, board chair); Jamie Twining (Whatcom, Sacred Heart parishioner, vice chair); Drew Zender (Whatcom, Assumption parishioner, treasurer); and Carmen Werder (Skagit, St. Charles parishioner, secretary).

Non-voting board members are in alphabetical order: Jeff Miller (Skagit, board member emeritus); the Rev. Paul Magnano (Skagit, board member emeritus); and Andy Remien (NDRCHS administrator).

In October, NDRCHS will begin hosting information events at Assumption Catholic School, Immaculate Conception Regional School, and Sacred Heart Parish Hall in Bellingham, Wash. Please continue looking for information in your school bulletin. Until then, you can visit the school's website at <https://ndhighschool.org/>, follow it on Instagram at @northerndeaneryhs, or reach out directly to Andy Remien, NDRCHS administrator.

The mission of NDRCHS is to inspire learners to encounter Christ, critically engage important ideas and apply their gifts for the good of the world. The school's vision is to create an Archdiocesan Catholic high school that serves more than 200 students, prepares young people for all vocational and college pathways and reflects the rich diversity of the Catholic Church and the broader community. The school will carry the name Northern Deanery Regional Catholic High School until a formal naming process is completed. Sacred Heart Parish Hall, located in the Fairhaven neighborhood in Bellingham, will serve as the school's initial temporary location.

Specific questions about the school, including student application and enrollment, can be directed to Andy Remien, NDRCHS administrator, at andy@ndhighschool.org or (206) 605-9827.
